Hospitality News:

Exclusive: Come to this meeting if you want to work on downtown Orlando's soccer stadium and the Association's logo is displayed on the wall.

At the September Board Meeting, an official "Ribbon Cutting" Ceremony occurred to celebrate this partnership.

Big machinery is digging into the dirt, and concrete has been poured where Orlando City Soccer Club's $155 million stadium soon will rise. And subcontractors who want to be among the 900 construction workers involved in this should mark their calendars for Oct. 14.

That's when project construction manager Barton Malow Co. will host a subcontractor pre-bid meeting for its second bid package. That package includes work on the Major League Soccer stadium enclosure, mechanical-electrical-plumbing-fire protection, and the playing field. Those bids are due on Nov. 5.

The meeting will be from 2-4 p.m. at the Varsity Club at Orlando Citrus Bowl, 1 Citrus Bowl Place in downtown. See details on bidding on Barton Malow's website.

Crews from the local office of Barton Malow and its existing subs — JCB Construction Inc., Votum Construction LLC, Barton Malow Concrete, Power Engineering Group Inc. and Nash Inc. — are currently busy with infrastructure work, including foundation, infrastructure and utility installation.

The new stadium, which is expected to generate $100 million in economic impact, will open in mid- to late-2016 and will serve as home field for the Orlando City Lions. Other professional teams may also play there, including the National Women's Soccer League — which may happen as early as next year, as previously reported by Orlando Business Journal — and the United Soccer League.

Hiring expected to be strong in October despite recruiting challenges

Orlando Business Journal - The Buzz

Cindy Barth

In October, more than two out of five manufacturing and service-sector companies will add jobs, according to a new report from the Society for Human Resource Management.

Other findings from the Leading Indicators of National Employment survey:

Hiring rates will be steady in October compared with a year ago. A net of 45.3 percent of manufacturers and service-sector companies will add jobs in October.

Recruiting difficulty rose in September. For the 17th straight month, difficulty in recruiting candidates for key jobs reached four-year highs in both sectors.

Pay rates improved for some new hires in September. A net of 15.9 percent of manufacturers and a net of 16.1 percent of service-sector companies increased new-hire compensation in September.

A separate SHRM survey shows that nearly seven out of 10 HR professionals have some level of confidence in the U.S. labor market, and an even greater majority give positive marks on their organizations' financial health:

A total of 69 percent of respondents had some level of confidence in the U.S. job market for the second half of 2015 and expected job growth. More than half (51 percent) were somewhat optimistic, and another 18 percent were very optimistic. That is an increase from 64 percent in the second half of 2014.

In the second half of 2015, 42 percent of respondents expected hiring to occur at their organizations, unchanged from the second half of 2014. Among employer categories, large companies (those with 500 or more employees) were the most likely to add jobs (43 percent of those surveyed).

In the first half of 2015, 49 percent of companies surveyed added jobs. More than half (51 percent) of privately owned for-profit companies created new positions as part of their hiring plans during the first half of 2015.
