The Future of Travel is Diverse & More Inclusive!

It is National Travel and Tourism Week, and we are excited to continue championing and celebrating the diversity and inclusivity of our industry, our people and the Central Florida community. Valuing diversity can no longer be a “separate” conversation but naturally woven into our decision making, resource allocation and social interactions. When organizations such as CFHLA establish a culture of inclusion through leadership focused on issues of diversity; organizations achieve a new culture of inclusion. An inclusive culture makes team members feel safe and creates an awareness and connectivity to the guests and to our community, which we serve.

So you might ask, what hinders diversity? Bias.

Bias is how we perceive the world around us and the small assumptions we unconsciously and consciously make. It happens when we speak to others, when we apply to jobs, and when we work with others. Bias influences our behavior—and our behavior has an impact on others.

When leadership values, includes, and respects others, team members become more engaged, and they make their best contributions. In the contrast, when we ignore or exclude individuals due to bias, it affects their sense of belonging and, as a result, their level of engagement decreases.

According to McKinsey and Company:

- Companies in the top 25% on gender and racial diversity are more likely to over perform in relation to their industry peers.
- Companies in the lowest 25% on gender and racial diversity are more likely to under perform in relation to their industry peers.
These data points reflect that when bias is mitigated and diversity is encouraged, teams feel more inclusive, make better decisions, and deliver better results.

Words in Action

Since 2020, the Central Florida Hotel and Lodging Association (CFHLA) has made a commitment to using our collective voice to build a stronger and more inclusive community – where each individual is welcomed, valued, respected and free to pursue lives of choice. To this end, throughout 2021, the CFHLA Board of Directors completed a 6-part training on "The Importance of Understanding Implicit and Explicit Bias."

What you may not know is that we analyzed the data, and the results were astounding:

- 90% showed knowledge gained
- 92% showed knowledge retained
- 100% stated others would benefit from the bias training

In response to these results, CFHLA launched a brand-new Diversity Committee focused on building out an effective framework, in order to amplify our voice on behalf of the hospitality industry. The first initiative for the Diversity Committee was to draft and administer a D.E.I. assessment for the CFHLA Board of Directors to complete.

The results of the assessment, uncovered the need for the additional actionable items:

1. Create a Tool Kit for Listening Circles - Listening Circles provide companies with an open environment for all staff to share their thoughts and experiences on diversity, equity, and inclusion with leadership. The Listening Circles Tool Kit will provide resources to our CFHLA Lodging and Allied members, on how to focus on empathy and equality, so participants listen and learn from the experiences of their peers.

2. Launch a Leadership Mentoring Program - After reviewing the results of the CFHLA Board of Directors Diversity Assessment, it was discovered that there tends to be a disparity when comparing the diversity of mid-level management to senior and executive-level positions within CFHLA's member properties. CFHLA is committed to supporting our future Lodging and Allied leaders, by creating programs and opportunities for mentoring and developing mid-level leaders. By doing this, we will help advance careers, increase retention in Central Florida marketplace, and build a more diverse future workforce.

3. Create more Outreach opportunities for High School students - CFHLA's Lodging and Allied Members have currently Adopted 73 schools for the 2021-2022 School Year. Unfortunately, several of our local middle and high schools, which have hospitality and/or culinary magnet programs, do not have a strong connection with CFHLA and our members. The goal is to work with our local school boards to develop new outreach activities, including increased mentorship and internship opportunities, that will support these magnet programs and advance CFHLA's commitment to the future workforce of the hospitality industry.

There are currently working subcommittees for each aforementioned action item; and to join a subcommittee, please contact Melanie Anesh, at melanie.anesh@cfhla.org.
